Throughout the long and anxious time during which the bostilities with France continued and the coast of Formers was blockaded the foreigners in curity both for their persons and property, even the mission chapels in the outlying villages not being interfered with. I the January-February number of the Chinese Re corder the Rev. THOMAS BARCLAY, in a paper | Pacific station. on the influence of the war on mission work in Formosa and Amoy, says, referring to Taiwan; -" From our stations we heard of threats of persecution of the Christians because of their connection with the foreigners, though those were a good deal quieted by a proclamation of the Taotai's pointing out the difference between the English and French nations. Indeed, throughout all we were glad to belive that the Authorities were willing to do all in their power for our protection; the only fear was whother they would be able to protect us in case of a popular rising. An additional cause of anxiety was that our Mission compound is situated in the East or landward quarter of the city, so that to reach the post of Auping, where most of the foreigners live and where we might hope to find a gusboat, we would have been obliged to pass through about two miles of Chinese street and about as much on the open plain, difficult. In October, during the excitement following the bombardment of Tameui and the occupation of Relung, attacks were made on pative Christiane and mission property. These are thus referred to by Mr. BARCLAT :- "Gange of roughs assembled in several places and attacked the chapels and Christians. Six chapels were entirely destroyed and two others were plundered; in one place two worshippers were put to death, and in other places some were hadly used. This, however, was soon put a stop to, and I have not heard of any disturbances since there." So matters continued, no further outrages taking place, until the other day, when Kelung was evaquated by the French, and the Chinese soldiery looted some of the foreign houses there, to which event our correspondent referred as follows: -"Late news from Kelung is very unsatisfactory. It appears that the soldiery this time have been misbehaving, and we regret extremely to hear it, so throughout the war of reprisals General Soon's men have been kept well in order, and when Twatutis foreign hongs were threatened in Occober and were to follow the destruction of the missionary schools and chapels, the Taipeh of Taipehfu called out Lrv Ming-onvan's soldiers and quelled the rising of the people most effectually and promptly." The proceedings of the disorderly soldiers at Kelung were however, quickly stopped, and it is quite evident that all through the war there has been a sincere wish and endeavour on the part of the mandarins in Formosa to protect foreign interests. In contrasting the north with the south it must be borne in mind that in the latter there was no actual fighting, while in the former the French bambardments were eminently calculated to infuriate the people. On the whole, therefore, it is matter for satisfaction that the outrages bave been so limited in number and extent,

CHARGE OF HIDNAPPING. Wong Avan, boarding house runner, was charged with having decoyed away a boy named Hu Kum Yune, 13 years of age, and having sold him for $20, and Chau Fan, shopman, was charged with buying the boy, and unlawfully detaining him.

Mr. Caldwell defended the second prisoner. Hu Kum Yune said that he was the nephew of Hu Tao, compradore to the Government Civil Hospital, and having no parents living. resided with his uncle near the Ko.Shing Theatre. On the 18th June, at about midday he was on his way to school when he was met by two men whose names he subsequently learned to be Kam Shu and Tai Hing. These men asked him where he was going, and telling him it was yet too early to go to school they enticed him to go with them for a walk. They took him to the Luk Ki shop in Second-street. There he was given some food, and he had been detained in that shop until the commencement of this case. He saw the first defendant in that boy. After that time he passed into the keeping of the first defendant, and remained had some talk about purchasing him. second defendant asked him if he was willing to go with him to Amoy, but the first defendant lid not give him a chance of replying and answered for him that he was willing to go anywhere. The josses I have seen are nearly always made of wood; and are either painted black or have become dirty in appearance for want of soap. These wooden gods or devils are carried out in a chair for a walk, and the men carrying them are seen to swing the chair about, and to shake up the joss in a most uncomfortable way, and yet not only the bearers, but the native on-lookers, deceive themselves to such an extent that they give out most unhesitatingly that the "devil" or jose inside is really moving the chair. it is the birthday of the "Twatutis Joss" other jouses have to assist in the celebration. The ceremony takes place every year at Twatutia. We have never seen it performed elsewhere in China. It is like nothing else of its kind that we have witnessed. Only an intelligent Chinsman would be able to explain its meaning; the common people who take the most violent interest in the exhibition wary considerably in their statements if questioned on the subject. Twatutis is also a great place for open air singsongs, and on certain occasions the processions proviously referred to reach for over a mile. Some of them remind one of the Lord Mayor's show in London, and the running across a heap of burning coals would almost make one believe that the custom came from India, or from Zululand where a similar religious ordeal has to be gone

To the illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration:— Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters; and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hithert, published. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attrined. The typography divides the encoses of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast conomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vasuat spices which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To the illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration:—Chumers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters; and Medhurst's English and Chinese Chichonary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other clementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hithert; published. For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is an complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which vary few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To purise resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarte pages. THE BRIDAL VEIL. The origin of the bride's veil has long been a matter of keen dispute, and is still an undecided question amongst antiquarians. Considering the prominence which is at tached to this graceful article of finery in the bridal costume, in our own and other countries, one could have wished that its history had been satisfactorily settled. It has been snggested, however, that it may be a substiute for the long flowing bair which, according to Anglo-Saxon usage, formed a natural and effective veil for the bride when she made her public entry into church at the marriage ceremony. Indeed, it seems to have been regarded as indispensable that the bride, on this eventful occasion, should which a woman's hair was ever seen in public. It must be remembered that this custom had a significant meaning, for, as the privilege, of wearing the hair loose specially belonged to those born of free parents, so, when the newly-married Anglo-Saxon bride bound up her tresses, it denoted that she had sacrificed her freedom, and was henceforth subject to her husband's authority. In the same way in Russia, unmarried girls wear their back hair hanging in a long, single plait, adorned with ribbons, and sometimes, especially in Zafiro Little Russia, with flowers. This plait, called Russian People" (p. 272), "is a maiden's Alert chief ornament, the cherished object of her Allie Rowe common people, were simply salted and support a home of their own are incalculable. is coming upon her, for married women do not wear the plait.
